Lynn and Ron Scott of Moon Mountain Sanctuary on the outskirts of Eumundi has a well established reputation as a leading light in the large-scale sculpture scene in Australia with an enviable private collection from renowned artists having their works already on display across the magnificent property overlooked by Mt Cooroy.

Moon Mountain Sanctuary on the outskirts of Eumundi proudly hosted an installation event recently to embrace the talents of emerging local sculptor Finn Cossar.

Finn's latest inspiring and thought-provoking work aptly named Infinity is by far his largest scale creation to date. Lynn and Ron 's backing for the sculpture project will further assist Finn to be recognized for his "extraordinary artistic talent". Finn said, "the flow of the surrounding land and the powerful presence of Moon Mountain (Mt Cooroy) inspired the creation of Infinity.

“We were delighted to have shared Finn’s latest work now on display at Moon Mountain Sanctuary with local dignitaries including Sunshine Coast Councillors Maria Suarez and Joe Natoli, along with luminaries from across the Australian sculpture and artistic community,” said Ron.

“As much as we feel privileged and get immense personal pleasure from being surrounded by so many wonderful sculptures within the 45-acre Sanctuary every day, we also want to ensure we are helping to develop and share the inspired visions from talented people such as Finn Cossar on a far broader scale, when they so rightly deserve their place in the sun locally and nationally,” said Lynn.

“With a background spanning decades in small business and industry, the Scott’s life on Sanctuary has been to bring together like-minded individuals to collaborate and work together for the common good and advancement of all involved. We seek now to use that experience and those skills to head start the recognition of amazing works of artisans and crafts people from across the Sunshine Coast and Australia,” said Ron.

The event also saw the coming together of a number of other local Sunshine Coast patrons of the arts and local business people and professionals who share the passion that Lynn and Ron Scott live by, to promote and encourage talented local artists in their craft and grow the arts reputation on the Coast and nationally.
